

GOLD IS GREAT BUT THERE IS A BIGGER OPPORTUNITY LOOMING

With the DOW sitting just under 18,000 how much more upside potential does it really have?

For centuries, people have turned to gold to safeguard their assets during economic upheaval. Gold has withstood the test of time and can still be found today within the artifacts of some of the oldest civilizations in recorded history. There is not a time in written history where gold has been worth zero. From antiquity to present day gold has played a major role in monetary systems all over the world. Less known as a financial haven during troubled times is gold's ever-precious companion, silver. For the last century silver has been just as important as gold and in the coming times could overshadow gold. The old saying, "To know the future is to know the past," could not be more applicable to silver today. Silver versus gold -- a historic comparison suggests silver now to be largely undervalued. If we look at the historical price of silver versus gold we will quickly come to understand why silver prices today could become one of the biggest opportunities we might have in our lifetime. In 1792 the silver-to-gold price ratio was fixed by law in the United States at 15:1. This means it would take 15 ounces of silver to buy 1 ounce of gold. In 1803, France set the silver-gold ratio at 15.5:1 -- about what it had been for time immemorial. Today, however, that precious metals ratio is completely askew. While the price of gold now hovers at about $1,270 per ounce, silver sells at $17 an ounce. That's a silver-gold ratio of 74:1. Given the historical price difference, silver should be roughly $85 per ounce without the price of gold even moving. That is a difference in value of 500%. If gold should bounce back to its 2011 high of $1,921 per ounce that means at a 15:1 ratio silver would be sitting at $128 per ounce. This is an increase in value of over 750% from the silver price today. If the historic price difference between silver and gold is any indication of its future value, we should be looking toward a much greater spike in silver than it's high of $49 five years ago. But there are broader trends that indicate a brighter future for silver. For the first time in history, there is more gold for investors to buy than silver. This has never happened before. More silver is being consumed than produced. That means a current worldwide shortage, with demand only expected to increase. On top of the monetary value of silver there is great industrial use for the metal. As technology continues to evolve, more silver is expected to be employed beyond its current use in cell phones, computers, lights, solar panels, batteries and more. In short, silver is the most important assets one can acquire today and there may never be a better opportunity to buy it at its current low price. For years we have been advising our clients at Regal Assets to purchase silver. I could not be more bullish on the asset. I personally own silver and continue to acquire it. Buying silver can be tricky, especially with individual investors having little or no exposure to cash. In 1998 the United States government began allowing citizens to purchase physical gold through their existing retirement account as well as silver. We at Regal Assets have been helping investors purchase gold and silver through their existing retirement accounts and are a leader in the field. Nearly every working class American has a retirement account and if you don't have at least 5% of your wealth in gold or silver you owe it to yourself to make the move. With our expert team and years of experience we can complete a transfer from your existing retirement account into physical gold or silver in as soon as 48 business hours. The age of silver is upon us. There may be no other opportunity like this one to invest in it. I truly hope you are one of those who do. ■
